CLASS NEWS.

I. Babbitt has been Harvard Exchange Professor to the Sorbonne in Paris, during the second half of this College year.

A. G. Barret is one of the charter members of the American Law Institute organized at Washington, D. C., in February, 1923; he has been elected a director in the National Bank of Kentucky, succeeding his father in that position.

C. C. Batchelder, after leaving this country in April, 1922, traveled in England, France, Spain, Switzerland, Italy and Germany, and returned to India in October. On October 7, he wrote to the Class Secretary as follows: "Had an interesting time, among other things, as the guest of the Maharaja of Mysore. I find India improving greatly since the arrest of Gandhi and the other agitators who wish to go back to Vedic days, and abolish money, railroads, post offices, roads, all machinery, and in short all the achievements of the last 3,000 years. He urged all his followers to work to support themselves at the spinning wheel, at which they could not possibly earn more than 5 annas (an anna is about 2c) a day, while it takes 8 annas for support. Many tried it and gave it up for evident reasons. To the surprise of outsiders, there were no riots following the arrest, and general quiet seems to have resulted. To my mind, this is partly due to the bountiful harvests, and to the great improvement in foreign and domestic trade. Empty stomachs provided excellent mediums for Bolshevistic ideas, and Gandhism is the Indian form of Bolshevism. The whole situation is complicated, and not at all understood out of India. I feel that India is an excellent market for foreign trade. Personally, I feel Gandhi is sincere, though many do not, but that he is a Peter the Hermit born too late, and made use of by unscrupulous agitators for their own personal benefit. Fortunately a moderate party is growing up, which wishes to achieve reforms by constitutional means. This is my third visit to India, and I have been five times each in Japan and China, and twice in the Philippines, and once each in Indo-China and Java and Sumatra, twice in Burma, and five times in the Straits Settlements. I feel like a wanderer."

He is now back again in this country, and has just recovered from a severe operation in Boston. In April, he delivered an address before the Harvard Club of Washington.

A. C. Bent has completed the Fourth Volume of his "Life Histories of North American Birds," and it has just been published by the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, D. C.

C. A. Blomgren was a delegate from Augustana Theological Seminary, at Rock Island, Ill., to the Centennial celebration of the Yale Divinity School, Oct. 23-25, 1922.

G. C. Bullard is with George H. Burr & Co., commercial paper and investment securities, Boston.

R. C. Cabot has written an introduction to a book by G. C. Cox, '08, on "The Public Conscience, a Case Book in Ethics." His residence is now in Cambridge.

Eric Bernard Dahlgren died at Washington, D. C., November 20, 1922. He was born at Washington, D. C., Sept. 15, 1866, the son of Admiral John Adolph and Madeline Vinton (Goddard) Dahlgren. After preparing at Georgetown College, he entered Harvard in October, 1888, and was graduated with the Class in 1889, his degree being granted out of course in 1890. After studying law at the Harvard Law School for two years, he entered the banking business in New York. From 1895 to 1900, he resided in St. Paul, Minn., being with the Minneapolis Trust Co., and in 1898, he became a director in the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce. From 1900 to 1908, he was a member of Zimmerman, Dahlgren & Co., stockbrokers, in New York. After 1908, he engaged in no active business, and resided in Washington. His interests were largely social, riding, and yachting, but he lived a somewhat retired life.

He married Lucy Drexel at New York, Dec. 11, 1890, and was divorced in 1913; his children were eight: Lucy, born Nov. 10, 1891; Madeline, Dec. 10, 1892; Katherine, March 20, 1894; Urica, July 31, 1895; Olga, Feb. 19, 1898; Eric, April 24, 1900; Joseph, Jan. 24, 1903; Eva, April 19, 1904.

C. B. Davenport's daughter, Jane J., was married Aug. 19, 1922, to Reginald Gordon Harris. He presided at the dinner given to Emeritus Prof. E. L. Marks by the latter's former pupils, Dec. 27, 1922, in Cambridge. A gold medal was conferred upon him by the National Institute of Social Sciences, April 25, 1923.

J. T. Davis has been staying at Jekyll Island, Ga., this spring.

P. Dexter's son, William (LL. B. '22), was married to Constance V. R. Thayer, on April 2, 1923.

C. Downer has been staying in Washington, D. C., this spring (but did not call on the Class Secretary).

F. W. Faxon has been on a prolonged trip this spring to Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Havana, Panama Canal, and Costa Rica. He has published his "Annual Magazine Subject-Index, 1921"; "Dramatic Index, 1921"; "Bulletin of Bibliography and Dramatic Index."

C. D. Gibbons is now practicing law in New York City, his specialty being Spanish-American legal matters.

J. L. Goodale has been elected a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; he is on the committee appointed by the Harvard Board of Oversees to visit the Harvard Botanical Museum.

George Vernon Gray died at Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 15, 1923. He was born in New York, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1867, the son of George Edward and Lucinda Susannah (Corning) Gray, his father being the Chief Engineer of the Southern Pacific R. R. He prepared for college at W. P. Casey's School. Admitted as a special student, September, 1885, he left College at the end of the junior year. He then became a Clerk in Wells Fargo & Co.'s Bank of San Francisco. From 1889 to 1897, he was with George V. Gray & Co., in the mining and commission business. In 1897, he went to Dawson, in Canadian Yukon, with the early gold rush, and remained there in the mining business until February, 1900. From 1900 to 1906, he engaged in mining in Yreka, Calif. From 1906 until about 1915, he was a mining chemist in San Francisco, after which owing to ill health, he retired from business and lived in Berkeley, Calif.

F. Green is one of the charter members of the American Institute of Law. He has an article on "The Relativity of Legal Relations," in the Illinois Law Quarterly for June, 1923.

P. F. Hall's widow has published for private circulation a memorial volume on her husband, containing examples of many of his valuable literary productions on immigration and on psychical, sociological and other topics.

J. R. Hayes received first prize in a Librarian's Prize Contest for his review of "The Dim Lantern."

E. W. Hawley's courses in Parliamentary Law, at the University of Minnesota, are being repeated this year, and largely attended by members of the Legislature and by Minneapolis city government officials.

M. D. Hull was elected to Congress, April 3, 1923, to fill the unexpired term of the late James R. Mann, Representative from Chicago. He is the second '89 Congressman (Magee being the other).

L. Hulley's daughter, Mary Crozer, was married to John David Beatty, on Dec. 23, 1922.

F. E. Huntress was one of the delegates appointed by Governor Cox last summer to represent Massachusetts at the Brazil Centennial Exposition at Rio de Janeiro.

W. L. Jennings has been re-elected a director of the Worcester Medical Milk Commission; also president of The Bohemians—a social organization of Worcester.

A. H. Knapp is attending a convention in San Francisco.

H. B. Lathrop, who has been in Paris and London for the past year, working on a new book, returned to Madison, Wis., this June.

G. D. Latimer has been staying in Washington this spring. He addressed the Harvard Club there in April. He spent the winter of 1921-22 in Rome.

F. B. Lord's daughters, Katherine A. and Dorothy C. are respectively University of California B. S. '19 and A. B. '21.

G. S. Mandell has been made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, by the French Government, the presentation being made in Boston, Feb. 13, 1923.

S. A. Manley writes to the Class Secretary: "I have been keeping fairly well and mildly enjoying life, in spite of being a partial paralytic. Memories mean much at fifty-five, and most of mine are pleasant. Nothing to say except that I have been elected Vice-President of the Augusta Savings Bank."

P. Marquand's son, John P., was married to Christina D. Sedgwick, Sept. 8, 1922, at Stockbridge, Mass.; he has written a volume of short stories, entitled "Four of a Kind" (Scribners).

H. E. Meeker is on the Board of Managers of the Harvard Club of New York City.

J. Mitchell was in Egypt this winter.

W. L. Monro gave an address before the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, March 15, on "Some Problems of Today," discussing taxation, labor, socialism, railroads, etc.; it was published in Pittsburgh First, the official organ of the Chamber. He has been elected a director of the Duquesne Light Company, and of the Philadelphia Company, of Pittsburgh; also a director of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association and of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Casualty Insurance Co.; also a junior warden of the Church of the Ascension.

C. H. Moore, as representative of the University (in company with L. P. Marvin, '98, President of the Associated Harvard Clubs), spoke at the annual dinners of the Harvard Clubs of Milwaukee, Feb. 20; Chicago, Feb. 21; St. Louis, Feb. 22; Detroit, Feb. 24.

W. W. Naumburg has gone to Spain on his wedding trip.

W. F. Pillsbury has carried on his business as a member of the New York and Boston Stock Exchange, since Jan. 1, 1923, under the new firm name of Pillsbury, Remick & Co., at his old address, 8 Congress St., Boston.

J. D. Prindle is to travel in Spain this summer.

G. A. Reisner. The Class Secretary had hoped to hear from Reisner in Egypt in time for this Bulletin, but, failing such communication, publishes a summary written by Reisner, last year, for the Harvard Alumna Bulletin of his sixteen years of excavation in the Nile Valley:

"The following greater pieces of excavation have been carried out:

(1) The Pyramid temples of King Mycerinus, who built the Third Pyramid at Giza (about 2,750 B. C.), 1908, 1910.

(2) About half of the great cemetery of princes, courtiers, and officials beside the Giza Pyramids, 1905-07, 1912-16.

(3) The rock-cut tombs of the feudal lords of the Harenome at Bersheh, 1915.

(4) The Nubian archaeological survey for the Egyptian Government, 1907, 1908.

(5) The excavation of the palaces of the Israelite kings at Samaria, for the Harvard Palestinian Expedition, 1909, 1910.

(6) The excavation of the fort and cemetery of the Egyptian administration of Ethiopia at Kerma, in the Sudan (1900-1600 B. C.), 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916.

(7) Excavations at Napata, the capital of Ethiopia (Sudan), 1916-1920: (a) Temples at Gebel Barkal; (b) Royal cemetery of the Egyptian XXVth Dynasty at El-Kur-uw; (c) Royal cemetery of Tirhaqa and the later kings of Ethiopia at Nuri.

(8) Excavation of the pyramids of Meroe, the later and southern capital of Ethiopia, which was begun in March, 1920, and is still (1922) in hand.

The bare record of sites excavated conveys no idea of the months and years of patient work, of the mechanical difficulties overcome, of the stirring discoveries of great works of art, or of the adventures on which the expedition has embarked, often at the risk of its whole future. Over 20,000 photographs have been taken; forty folios have been filed with the register of objects found; fifty diaries have been written; and card catalogues, tomb cards, drawings, plans, and maps have accumulated in similar quantities.

 The most important contribution to human knowledge which we have made has been the recovery of the history of Ethiopia, that part of the Nile Valley which lies south of Egypt proper between the First Cataract and the head waters of the Nile."

Moses Ben-Isaac-Faraj Reuben died, December 8, 1921. He was born at Bombay, India, the son of Isaac and Ora (Gundil) Reuben. After preparing at Berkeley Gymnasium and the University of California, he entered with the Class of 1889 as a special student, and remained during the Freshman year. After leaving College, he was admitted to the bar in Boston, Mass., and practiced there until 1914. He was actively interested in Republican municipal politics, and in 1914 was a member of the Republican State Committee. In the Spanish-American War he served in Battery A, First Mass. Heavy Artillery Volunteer, enlisting May 9, and being mustered out Nov. 14, 1898. Since 1914, the Class Secretary has had no word from him. He married Ida Shoolman at Boston, Jan. 8, 1903, and had two children, Isaac, born Oct. 19, 1903, and Ora, born Sept. 12, 1906.

Philip Murray Reynolds died in Boston, Mass., Feb. 16, 1923, at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, of pneumonia following an operation on Feb. 8. He was born at Nahant, Mass., July 8, 1868, son of Dr. John Phillips and Jane Minot (Revere) Reynolds of Boston. He prepared for college at G. W. C. Noble's School, Boston. After spending his freshman year at Amherst College, he entered the Class of 1889 in his sophomore year. After graduation, he took a year's course on electrical subjects at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. From 1890 to 1898, he was successively with Thomson Houston Electric Co., General Electric Co., Brown Electric Co., and Anchor Electric Co. From 1899 to 1904, he was with Planters Compress Co., at Boston. From 1904 to 1907, he was treasurer of the Old Colony Street Ry. Co., and Boston & Northern Street Ry. Co. From 1907 to 1910, he was treasurer of the Ipswich Mills, and since 1907, has been treasurer and director of Scott & Williams, Inc., builders of knitting machinery, also of the General Knit Fabric Co., and of the O'Bannon Corporation; he was a director of the Roxbury Carpet Co.

He was married to Mary Blaisdell Gardner of Brookline, Mass., April 18, 1893 (who survived him for only about two months after his death, dying in April, 1923). He had four children: Harrison, born May 6, 1895; Philip Murray, Jr., Aug. 6, 1897 (who died Feb. 13, 1898); James Robbins, July 3, 1901; Barbara Murray, June 10, 1903.

"Kindly, entertaining and charming, with rare human sympathy and with deep and abiding affection for his friends, Phil Reynolds was a man who always understood—who brought out all that was best in his companions. A man of sound judgment, of the highest standards of character, but with no thought that he was such; by simply being himself—just what he was—he made us all happier and better in his presence. He was like a perpetual beam of sunshine—always cheering and warming heart and soul. One of our most loyal as well as lovable of Classmates, he will be sadly missed. His last conspicuous service to his Class and College was his thorough, intelligent and effective work as Chairman of the Class Committee of the Endowment Fund. The high rank which the Class achieved in the honor rolls of the Endowment Fund Campaign was due in no small degree to his efforts." O. P.

G. B. Salisbury has retired from active business. His daughter, Dorothy, was married June 9, 1923, to Constantine Lisiecki.

R. Salisbury has written (with William Frederick Dix), "Man and the Two Worlds: A Layman's Idea of God" (Harper & Brothers, N. Y., 1922).

W. H. Siebert delivered an address at the annual meeting of the Historical Society of Detroit, in January. At the annual meeting of the American Historical Association at New Haven, he was appointed chairman of the committee on local arrangements for the next meeting to be held at Columbus, Ohio.

L. F. Snow will be a member of the Faculty of Northwestern University this summer.

G. Strong has been elected chairman of the board of directors of the Republic Realty Mortgage Corporation.

P. D. Trafford was run down, in March, by a taxieab, but luckily had no bones broken, though suffering a severe shock; he has now recovered and is sailing for Europe, June 20, with his son, P. D. Trafford, Jr., '25, for a six weeks' holiday. His daughter, Melinda, was married to Arthur Terry, Jr., May 5, 1923.

R. DeW. Walsh has consolidated his insurance business with Rose and Kiernan, Inc., at Albany, N. Y., and is the vice-president of the corporation. The Class Secretary is informed that Walsh's business is the leading insurance agency in Northern New York.

R. D. C. Ward wrote an interesting article on "The Old-Fashioned New England Winter," in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, Feb. 1, 1923; also he has written an article on "Climate and Climatology" for Vol. 30 of the Encyclopedia Britannica, 12th Ed. (new volume). He is leaving on June 11 for work on the United States ice-patrol in the North Atlantic Ocean.

Ervin Wardman died in New York, N. Y., January 13, 1923. He was born at Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 25, 1865, the son of George and Mary Virginia (Ervin) Wardman. After preparing for College at Phillips Exeter, he entered with the Class in the fall of 1885, and graduated with the Class of 1888 in June, 1888. He was a prominent member of the Lampoon board of editors. After graduation, he joined the editorial staff of the New York Tribune; in 1895 he became managing editor of the New York Press, and Editor-in-Chief and publisher in 1896. In 1916, he went to the New York Sun, of which Frank A. Munsey had become the owner, and was shortly made vice-president of the Sun-Herald corporation, Sun Printing & Publishing Co. and New York Herald Co., assisting Mr. Munsey in the direction of the Sun, and later of the Herald.

The New York Tribune, Jan. 14, 1923, said of Wardman: "He was one of the great figures of the newspaper world * * * he coined the phrase, 'yellow journalism.' * * * Tall, and grim jawed, he showed his Calvinistic ancestry in every line of his face. The effect of sternness that he gave to the casual observer was relieved by the flickering light of humor that played in his blue eyes. His kindliness was revealed in the various philanthropies with which he was never publicly connected. Always on the lookout to help people, he started many young men on newspaper work, and his associates always found him quick to praise and just in criticism. When the United States entered the World War he originated the idea of the Sun Tobacco Fund, raising more than $500,000 by public subscription, which was spent under his direction to buy tobacco for the members of the American Expeditionary Forces. He understood every department of a newspaper. His intimate knowledge of labor conditions caused him to be appointed chairman of the labor committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and in this capacity he negotiated many important contracts with the printing crafts. He had the confidence of the labor leaders and the publishers alike, and through his good offices many serious difficulties were avoided." The New York World said, Jan. 15, 1923: "For many years Ervin Wardman was an outstanding figure in the crowded field of New York journalism. To those who best knew him by long association he was the true type of working newspaper man who by daily example and practice compelled respect for the best standards of his profession. * * * Success and distinction as writer and editor came to him as the reward of sheer ability, force of character and downright honesty of mind." The New York Sun said, Jan. 15, 1923: "It was as a student of and writer on economics that he was at his best. He loved figures, he reveled in mathematics, and delving into consular reports, into Government reports, into budgets and statements of expenditures in national and state affairs, and in the intricacies of business was a passion and a delight with him. He had the rare faculty of imparting to the reader in a brief editorial article the meat of his research, the picture of what it all meant. As an economist Ervin Wardman had no superior in American journalism."

In the Spanish-American War, Wardman enlisted as a private in Troop A, New York Volunteer Cavalry; served at Camp Black and Camp Alger; appointed 1st Lieutenant, July 14, 1898, in 201st N. Y. Vol. Infantry; transferred July 21, to 202d N. Y. Vol. Infantry; served in Porto Rico as Aide-de-Camp to Maj. Gen. Brooke; mustered out, Nov. 28, 1898.

He was the author of a novel, "The Princess Olga," published in 1901.

He was married to Caroline Klink Eyre at Washington, D. C., May 14, 1902, who died Sept. 19, 1906; he was married to Violet Boyer at Barrie, Ontario, Feb. 8, 1911. His wife and a son, George 2nd, born Nov. 12, 1911, survive him.

C. Warren has been elected a Resident Member of the Massachusetts Historical Society. His book, "The Supreme Court in United States History" (which has gone into a third printing), was awarded in May, 1923, the highest Pulitzer Prize ($2,000) by the Advisory Board of the Columbia School of Journalism (Worthington C. Ford, John Bach McMaster and Charles Downer Hazen being the Committee on the History Prize), "for the best book upon the history of the United States" published in 1922. He delivered the Annual Address before the Massachusetts State Bar Association, Oct. 14, 1923, at Salem, Mass., on "The Early History of the Supreme Court of the United States in Connection with Modern Attacks on the Judiciary." He is to deliver an address before the Maryland State Bar Association, June 29, 1923, at its annual meeting at Atlantic City. He is one of the charter members of the American Law Institute.

W. H. Warren is research chemist of the Noil Chemical and Color Works, Inc., at New York. His home is now at Yonkers, N. Y.

G. F. Weld has published a book, Oct., 1922, "The Meaning of Christian Healing;" he has been elected president of the board of trustees of the Museum of Comparative Oology, at Santa Barbara, Calif.; his son, Edrie Amory, '22, is to marry Gertrude Mackay, at Brookline, Mass., June 21, 1923.
